Compression Solutions

Effective Long-Term Management of Lymphatic and Venous Disorders

Larger individuals can face challenges managing their edema caused by lymphatic and venous disorders. For these individuals it is crucial that the fluid in their legs keeps moving and is absorbed by the vessels in their circulatory and lymphatic systems to decrease swelling. Gradient compression garments apply more pressure distally while gradually decreasing pressure as the garment travels up the extremity. By applying a measured amount of compression to the leg, it helps manage venous conditions by removing excess fluid and reduces the risk of infection and further development.

Minimize Toileting Challenges

Larger individuals can face toileting challenges due to their relative immobility and excess weight. Proper positioning, difficulty moving and toilet size can be safety concerns. It is important to use quality products that are the right size, fit well and absorb properly to avoid unexpected leaks and maintain the individual's dignity.

Manage Odour Control

Direct skin-on-skin contact causes odour because large skin folds can harbour moisture that increases the growth of bacteria, yeast, or fungus. Avoid embarrassment and humiliation among bariatric individuals by making them feel protected, comfortable, confident and dignified in their daily lives.

Skincare Solutions

Promote Hygiene

Bathing can be challenging to many bariatric individuals as they may have large, heavy skin folds that can be difficult to cleanse underneath, and may have difficulty accessing a bath or shower. Bariatric individuals may suffer skin breakdown and rashes as a result of perspiration, friction, and residue, often referred to as Moisture Associated Skin Dermatitis (MASD).

Protect Skin Integrity

Maintaining skin integrity for bariatric individuals can be a challenge. The TENA® Skincare System provides a non-irritating and pH neutral formulation to help control odour and care for delicate skin.
